PRESIDENT'S CORNER

Greetings,

In this ninth installment of "Here's Where We Stand," I'm pleased to discuss a development that will profoundly affect CWU and, potentially, our entire region. The Central Washington University Research Foundation (CWURF) is now officially incorporated with the State of Washington and may soon apply for 501(c) 3 nonprofit status with the IRS. Like research foundations at other institutions, CWURF will support Central's core research mission, help commercialize intellectual property, and establish important partnerships with regional agencies and businesses. Put another way, CWURF provides a point of contact between university research and the outside world, including public agencies, private foundations, and private corporations.

Establishing a research foundation is a milestone for Central, and I expect its influence will grow in importance over successive generations. For faculty and staff, it means more research opportunities and the possibility of commercializing the intellectual inquiry and exploration that academia incubates. As a separate nonprofit organization, CWURF can streamline administration of external contracts and provide more flexible processes for revenues and expenditures. The goal is to establish an agile and responsive structure that is also a clear point of contact for potential economic partners.

Structurally, CWURF is governed by a board of directors composed of university officers who serve in an ex officio capacity, a member of the Central Washington University Board of Trustees who is appointed by the board chair, and a small number of community members with special expertise. Current community members on the board are Dr. Vince Bryan, the founder of Cave B Winery and the Inn at SageCliffe (the holder of a successful medical patent), and Dr. Rick Johnson, medical director at Kittitas Valley Community Hospital.

In the future, CWURF's bylaws foresee the creation of an 'Innovation Park' that will have a separate board, or advisory committee, to provide guidance and support. The Innovation Park as a physical location ultimately will provide laboratory, office, and development space.

This raises an important point. An essential mission of CWU, as with Washington's other state-supported universities, is to provide research and service in the public interest. Central does this in many ways, of course, through concerts, lectures, and athletic events and through its profound impact on the local economy. However, CWURF and the Innovation Park promise to expand this contribution substantially. By helping to commercialize intellectual property, the Innovation Park will serve as an incubator for new businesses that will eventually transition into the private sector. The result will be jobs and tax revenue for the regional economy and, one would expect, continuing close ties between a successful business and CWU.

Indeed, CWURF represents an exciting new step for Central and for the region it serves.

Sincerely,

Jerilyn S. McIntyre
President

Grammy-Award winning mariachi ensemble.

On Wednesday, October 8, Terry Tempest Williams will discuss "Finding Beauty in a Broken World." Her free, public presentation is slated for 7:30 p.m. in the Music Building Concert Hall.

The author of more than a dozen books, Williams' latest work, Mosaic: Finding Beauty in a Broken World, provides a riveting account of her trip to Rwanda and the shattering stories of death and resilience she found there. Williams has testified before Congress on women's health issues, spent time in jail for acts of civil disobedience, and is the Annie Clark Tanner Scholar in Environmental Humanities at the University of Utah. She was also recently named the University of Wyoming's first Eminent Writer-in-Residence.

On Wednesday, October 22, Mariachi Los Comperos Di Nati Cano will perform in the Student Union and Recreation Center Ballroom. Tickets for the 7:30 p.m. show are $15 for general admission, while students will be admitted free.

Since 1961, Mariachi Los Camperos has produced nine albums. Its most recent, Amor, Dolor y La ´grimas (Love, Pain and Tears), was released last May. With a flair and sound unique to them, the eleven-member, Los Angeles-based band, directed by Natividad "Nati" Cano, may be most famous for its performance on Linda Ronstadt's double-platinum album, Canciones de mi Padre (Songs of My Father).

STUDENT VILLAGE SOUTH KICKOFF CELEBRATION SCHEDULED

A "kickoff celebration" for the $38 million Student Village South will be held Tuesday, October 7, at noon, on the east lawn of the Music Building. The residence facility, situated on the corner of Dean Nicholson Boulevard and Alder Street, is the first to be built on campus in nearly fifty years. The 477-bed hall replaces the housing lost when Courson and Muzzall were deconstructed earlier this year.

Student Village South is planned as two, four-story residential buildings, with a freestanding mechanical boiler building for heating and cooling components. Much of the interior layout will be based on an apartment-style set-up with two and four single-bedroom suites connected to shared living rooms, kitchenettes, and bathrooms. Although the majority of the rooms are single-occupancy, there will also be the traditional double rooms shared by two students.

Students will also enjoy the latest in high-tech wireless access throughout the building. In addition to resident living areas, Student Village South will have a large multi-purpose room that can be used as a classroom, study rooms on each floor, and a retail space that could possibly host a coffee shop or an extension of the Wildcat Shop bookstore. Amenities will also include laundry facilities, and recreational features such as pool tables and televisions. At this time, Student Village South is designated as housing for returning and transfer students and is slated for occupancy in fall 2009.

The project also includes as many "green" features as possible, in accordance to the university's commitment to environmentally conscious building. Designed with the latest technologies in energy efficiency and conservation, the building will have water-saving plumbing fixtures and storm water treatment facilities. The proposed heating, ventilation, and air conditioning systems currently exceed energy code standards. And, when possible, regionally produced materials are being used, which will support local suppliers and reduce transportation costs to the project.

In addition, the design of the building encourages "green" behavior; for example, recycling centers will be located throughout the complex. Covered bike stalls and a nearby Central Transit stop support alternative means of transportation, although there will be 200 parking stalls for residents.

VOLUNTEERS NEEDED FOR ANNUAL YAKIMA RIVER CLEAN UP

Volunteers are still needed for the 2008 Yakima River Clean Up. The 36th annual event, organized by the Don and Verna Duncan Civic Engagement Center, will be held Saturday, Oct. 4.

Last year, 154 volunteers removed nearly 4,000 pounds of litter from the Yakima River and adjacent areas. The project, created by late CWU administrator Don Wise, established a partnership between the university and Ellensburg community.

Volunteers are asked to gather at 8 a.m. in the Student Union and Recreation Center (SURC) east patio. Following a "Breakfast of Champions," volunteers will be organized into teams and then transported to various clean-up sites.

Following the litter collection efforts, the event will conclude with a free

Mochrie also won the Gemini award in 2003 for best ensemble performance in a comedy program or series, as well as a Writers Guild of Canada award in 2002.

Sherwood became a recurring performer on the British version of Whose Line Is It Anyway? in 1992 and on the American version in 1998. He is also known for his work on the 1994 sketch-comedy series, The Newz, several guest appearances on L.A. Law, and for hosting for The Dating Game from 1997 to 1998.

CWU'S HOLTMAN WINS NCAA NATIONAL SPORTSMANSHIP AWARD

The National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA) has named Central softball player Mallory Holtman, of White Salmon, as its female winner of the 2008 NCAA National Sportsmanship award. Holtman, who graduated from CWU in 2008 with a degree in business administration, was chosen the overall winner out of all three NCAA divisions.

Holtman was voted the 2008 Great Northwest Athletic Conference (GNAC) Player of the Year after finishing with a .397 batting average, ten home runs, and thirty-one RBI. She is the only player to earn first team all-conference honors four times in GNAC softball history and was also a three-time Academic All-Conference Team member.

Over the course of her five years at CWU, she compiled a 3.31 grade point average as a business administration major. She was also a selfless leader as team captain, which was best exemplified last fall when she gave up employment in the Office of Athletic Media Relations so that one of her teammates could have employment and continue to participate in softball. Mallory has also assisted in coaching youth softball teams in the Ellensburg community.

Holtman also received the NCAA Sportsmanship Award from the GNAC for the 2007-08 year.

ITS ENCOURAGES YOU TO COMPUTE SAFELY ONLINE

As October is National Cyber-Security Awareness Month, Information Technology Services (ITS) encourages CWU computer users not to fall victim to attempts to steal their identity or personal information.

Examples of such scams include e-mail that APPEARS to be from a financial institution asking you to log into your account and enter your account number and PIN; or an e-mail that APPEARS to be from a legitimate business seeking verification of financial information or your credit card number. The scammers hope they send an e-mail that appears to be legitimate and that you will then provide personal information, allowing them to access your account.

Additionally, you may receive an e-mail that APPEARS to be from within CWU itself seeking information, such as your e-mail address and password. These scammers are looking for account access so that they can then use it to spam thousands--maybe millions--of others from a legitimate university account.

ITS will never request your e-mail address and password and no reputable business will seek personal information or passwords through an unsolicited email. If you receive such e-mail, do NOT respond and simply delete it. In addition, ITS routinely posts information regarding such scams and viruses on the CWU Intranet.

For additional information on how to keep your computer and identity safe, visit www.cwu.edu/~its/cybersecurity/
