SUBJECT: Frequent Flyer Miles

Correspondence dated January 11, 2005 from the Office of Financial Management for the State of Washington concerning frequent flyer miles earned by state employees on state business states:

“Currently, the State of Washington does not have an official policy on frequent flyer miles. If specific agencies or colleges want to develop their own policies they are free to do so. Back in the early nineties a survey was done by OFM and it was determined that it was not cost effective to develop a policy. Nothing has changed since that time period.”

Central Washington University concurs with OFM that it is not cost effective to track frequent flier miles and Central Washington University’s policy regarding frequent flyer miles is that miles earned by CWU employees are retained by the employees.
