

Minor

Anthropology

Online Program

Program Overview

Anthropology explores what it means to be human at all times and in all places. Anthropologists study cultural and biological diversity as it reveals our human potential to adapt and change.

Anthropology minors choose three introductory courses from archeology, biological anthropology, cultural anthropology, and/or linguistics and three upper division courses in consultation with an advisor.

Our faculty are experienced in applications of anthropology to contemporary world issues and can advise about career paths related to museum work, contract archaeology, resource management, health careers, education, international development, global economy, environmental science, primatology and forensic science.

Program Requirements:

Select three from the following: Credits: 15

- ANTH 107 - General Anthropology
- ANTH 110 - Introduction to Biological Anthropology Credits: (5)
- ANTH 120 - Introduction to Archaeology Credits: (5)
- ANTH 130 - Introduction to Cultural Anthropology Credits: (5)
- ANTH 180 - Introduction to Linguistics Credits: (5)

And

Select three Department-approved electives at 3xx and/or 4xx level: Credits: 12 minimum

Total Credits: 27

For more information contact:

Lene Pedersen, Chair, Department of Anthropology
 400 E. University Way
 Dean Hall, Room 356
 Ellensburg, WA 98926
 Phone: 509.963.3211
 Email: lene.pedersen@cwu.edu Website:
<http://www.cwu.edu/anthropology>

