

RELS 102 - Food, Sex, and the Other: Everyday Religion and Morality

Description:

An examination of religion in everyday life and the contemporary moral issues both affecting and being addressed by world religious traditions. Course will not have an established scheduling pattern (Fall, Winter, Spring, Summer).

Learner Outcomes:

Upon successful completion of this course, the student will be able to:

- Identify how different world religious traditions address contemporary moral issues and controversies in everyday culture.
- Demonstrate an understanding, in writing and in class discussion, of diverse ethical issues and positions as they appear in everyday life.
- Use a diverse set of religious ethical theories to address contemporary moral issues as they arise in popular culture.
- Explain and justify their own positions on these questions, in discussion and in writing.