

Emily Rogers and Elena Tucker

The Introduction of the Monthly Newsletter

Throughout the summer, Elena and I worked on many projects for Academic Scheduling. One of our largest projects was the Room Audit. We walked to all the academic buildings on campus and updated information in 25Live. During that process, we were also on the lookout for attractions/art pieces of which we found many.

For the ROC that happened in October, we presented two slideshows that include those attractions/art pieces as well as the historic buildings and photographs. We have been discovering a ton of information from archives, including articles, photographs of students and people who impacted the school, and even old newspapers published by the university.

Our idea is to bring you a monthly newsletter to inform you about what we've been doing in Academic Scheduling, and highlight historic people, sports, buildings, and student life.

Barge Hall

Central Washington University's first building built on campus

Benjamin F Barge was the first principal of the Normal School in 1891 and presided over the school's opening on September 6th, 1891 (Central Connections, 2017). Barge Hall officially opened in 1894. The tallest building on campus, it is definitely an eye catcher for the university, located on Wildcat Way.

Barge was a passionate individual. The new school lacked a library, so Barge offered the students his personal books from his collection (What is in a Name, 2022).

Over many years, Barge Hall was the school's main building. As the university expanded, the classrooms and gymnasium were relocated across campus.

“My most embarrassing moment occurred in P.E, when I forgot the call to stop the marching unit and they marched right into the wall.”

Art on Campus

When you take a walk on Central Washington University's campus, you may not notice how much art is around. It is common for people to walk by many objects and not notice them. On the side of buildings, inside buildings, in the grass, and even in the ground you will see what I am talking about.

One big misunderstanding is that Central students or employees created the art on campus. Many pieces on campus are actually from the Washington State Arts Commission which partners with Central Washington University. We pay them to have the art here on campus.

Did you know?

Middle Marker of Washington State

When you look at a map of Washington, Ellensburg lands in the middle of the state. On the right side of Shaw-Smyser Hall is a geological marker that marks the center of the state. However, it has been said that this is not the true mark of the middle of the state.

Fake Windows?

Looking at the Science building you may notice the windows on the third floor. Well, do not let it fool you: the left four windows are fake. From the outside, it looks like there are 8 sets of windows, but if you go inside, only 4 are actually transparent.
