

Course Prefix and Number		Soc 358 - Sexualities
Learner Outcomes		Assessment
Describe and apply basic concepts and theories about the biological, psychological and social factors that influence the social construction and control of sexualities.		Students will take written exams demonstrating recognition of and ability to discuss concepts, theories and the multi-dimensional spectrum of sexuality in society.
Compare and contrast by life-course and cross cultural perspectives the ways sexualities are directly and indirectly shaped.		Students will conduct a quarter long written or creative project on examining an aspect of sexual identity across the life course and within different cultural contexts.
Identify, analyze, and discuss facts and myths about sexual identity and sexuality.		Students will write reflective assignments that clearly demonstrate analysis of the categorization of sexualities, representations of sexualities, sexual identities, sexual health and disease, and the social control of sexualities.
Demonstrate an understanding of the impact of sexualities and sexual identities on society.		Students will make presentation in which they discuss the impact for social programs and policies about sexualities and sexual identity that affect our society.	