When considering a job new grads look for:

- Casual atmosphere
- Clearly defined assignments
- Diversity of the work force
- Friendly co-workers
- Good benefits

When weighing a job offer, new grads look for:

- Opportunity for personal growth
- Friendly co-workers
- Job security
- Good benefits package
- Recognition for good performance

Which benefits matter most:

- Annual salary increase
- 401(k) company match

What about medical insurance?

Prior to 2012, employer-paid medical insurance was the overwhelming top choice as a benefit graduates sought from an employer. With the passage of the Affordable Care Act (ACA), that is no longer the case. Graduates still value employer-paid medical insurance, but its crucial position has diminished with the continuing access many will have to their parents’ health insurance until age 26.
