

Bachelor of Science Safety and Health Management

CWU-Ellensburg

Program Overview

The Safety and Health Management curriculum is recognized for preparing students to be well-rounded safety practitioners who have the confidence and capabilities to navigate the complex organizational and knowledge networks necessary to succeed in contemporary safety and health management. Position announcements and internship requests exceed the number of students in the curriculum. According to government projections, the Occupational Safety and Health profession is expected to grow nine to seventeen percent through the year 2014. Starting annual salaries generally range from $35,000 to $65,000. Salaries substantially increase with experience and certification. Positions are in many industries and career types with varied duties and experience requirements.
