

2-2.1

ACQUIRED IMMUNE DEFICIENCY SYNDROME

Central Washington University will use the most recent and pertinent information about HIV and AIDS to provide educational services for its students and employees about the infection and the disease; to protect the rights of persons with HIV infections and AIDS, and those without; to provide reasonable accommodations for students and employees with AIDS; and to provide either clinical services and counseling or referrals to persons with HIV infections and AIDS. The university will make its resources available for appropriate public service.

The vice president for student affairs has the administrative responsibility of implementing this policy and establishing the Central Washington University committee on AIDS. This committee shall represent a wide range of areas within our university.

[PAC: 7/91]