

Faculty Training Opportunities

Now - August 15th

To prepare for upcoming quarters of online and remote instruction, faculty are invited to participate in a self-paced, asynchronous course to be offered by Multimodal Learning.

The course will cover the basics of online/remote instruction as well as offer an intermediate level with pro tips and resources.

Topics to be covered:

- Comparison of activities for real time classroom teaching to online activities
- Canvas as your Classroom
- Time Management in the Online environment
- Communication with Online or Remote Students
- Delivering Effective learning
 - Synchronous (Real time) vs Asynchronous (at Student and Instructors Convenience)
- Creating Engagement
- Assessing Learning

The final assessment will result in a completed online course planning guide that can be used for future online/remote courses. The training is now available in the Canvas Dashboard.

Please note:

1. Course must be completed by August 15th to be eligible for the stipend.
2. Stipends will be processed starting in September.
3. Stipends are funded by the Provost's Office.
