William O Douglas: Welcome to college, the place where dreams come true and the opportunity to discover who you truly unfolds... Here we have gigantic lecture halls that fit 100 plus people and professors from all over the globe that are so busy, you only pretty much see them in your classes! We also have-- Wait a minute. This sounds terrible. Cut the intro! Cut it. I said cut it!

Hello, there. My name is William O. Douglas and if you think that sounded terrible just like I did, then I suggest CWU's DHC, or Douglas Honors College. Please listen to what some of my students have to say about a truly unique college experience...

Various Students: The DHC is the Douglas Honors College.

It's kind of an alternative college at CWU.

It is an interdisciplinary program that replaces the students regular general education courses with honor specific classes. They're far more interesting.

It's an opportunity for students to excel more, and to discover more about themselves, and have a lot more creativity in what they're learning.

It gives you a chance to really interact with small groups working with others, and really just having more involvement in your education.

I think there's a ton of reasons to join. First there's a thousand-dollar tuition waiver for any DHC student.

Well, it's a thousand dollars off tuition.

A thousand-dollar tuition waiver.

It's really dynamic classes, dynamic teachers, and a lot of people who are really passionate about learning.

They're not all just "oh let's do Chemistry 101." I'm not interested in that; I don't want to learn that!

We kind of, like, combine multiple disciplines together into one course.

We combine principles like chemistry and art. and learn about how chemistry makes up paint and how that applies to art.

I've enjoyed all the classes that I've taken. It's super nice having small class sizes, getting to know your professors.

There's usually only 20 to 25 students per class.

The counseling I felt that I had with the faculty as well as, like, taking the more discussion-based courses helped me still make myself well-rounded as a person.

Most of the classes are just discussion-based where we throw ideas against each other, where -- pretty much everyone in the class -- we all interact.

You get to create the type of environment that you need to learn. You're able to really get to know your professors a lot more than you would in a general education setting.

The DHC will often go to professors that are really well liked and ask that they teach DHC classes.

Our staff is always available to you no matter what the problem is.

Whether it's personal or professional, they're going to help you find a way to succeed at Central.

Ominous voice-over: In a world, where you want to join the DHC, this is how you do it...
