

Online Rural and Community Health Graduate Certificate

New at Central Washington University!

The Graduate Certificate in Rural and Community Health offers students the opportunity to pursue graduate coursework in public health with a focus on the determinants of health in rural settings and the resulting health outcomes in such communities. The 17-credit graduate certificate can be completed entirely online in 2 academic quarters, ideal for working students and those who are unable to commute to a traditional face-to-face academic program. Take exciting and innovative courses such as:

- PUBH 475: Community Health Administration
- PUBH 513: Health Disparities in Rural and Frontier Communities
- PUBH 571/572: Program Planning, Implementation & Evaluation
- PUBH 580: Grant Seeking and Administration in Public Health

Applications are due January 1st!
