CELEBRATING WOMEN'S HISTORY MONTH

WE DO NOT CONSENT:

Native Feminism on the Front Lines of Water Protection

April 11, 2018

6pm • Free Event • Dean Hall Lobby

Public Reception at 5pm

As the Tribal Co-Lead of the Shinnecock Indian Nation on the Mid-Atlantic Regional Planning Body of the U.S. National Ocean Council, Kelsey Leonard advocates for the protection of Indigenous waters. Join her as she examines the role of Indigenous women in settler-colonial states in defending their Nation's waters for future generations and their fight to create new institutions for transboundary water governance informed by indigenous ways of knowing.

Sponsored by the CWU Women's, Gender, & Sexuality Studies; Diversity & Equity Center; American Indian Studies; and Social Justice & Human Rights Dialogues.

CWU is an AA/EEO/Title IX Institution. For Accommodation: DS@cwu.edu.
